

COUNCILLOR DAVID CRISAFULLI

David is a born and raised North Queenslander and has been a Councillor since 2004 with the former Townsville City Council.

He studied a Bachelor of Journalism degree at James Cook University, 1997-1999. After completing his university degree he started work as a journalist with WIN television in Townsville. By 2002 he was appointed a News Director for Townsville, where he worked until 2003. During this time he also worked as a Townsville based correspondent for The Australian and Sunday Mail newspaper, did weekly work for DMG radio as a newsreader, and lectured at James Cook University. In June 2003, he began work as a Townsville based advisor for the Australian Government.

David and his wife Tegan have also operated small businesses throughout the region. Married since 2002, they welcomed their first child, Georgia, in 2005, and their second, Nicola, in 2007.